

HUSTLER SUPER PRO

A super new bike
from Ralph's
Bicycles

The Hustler Super Pro is a long wheelbase bike for bigger guys. Axle to axle is 37-1/2 inches. Check out the ventilated head gusset.

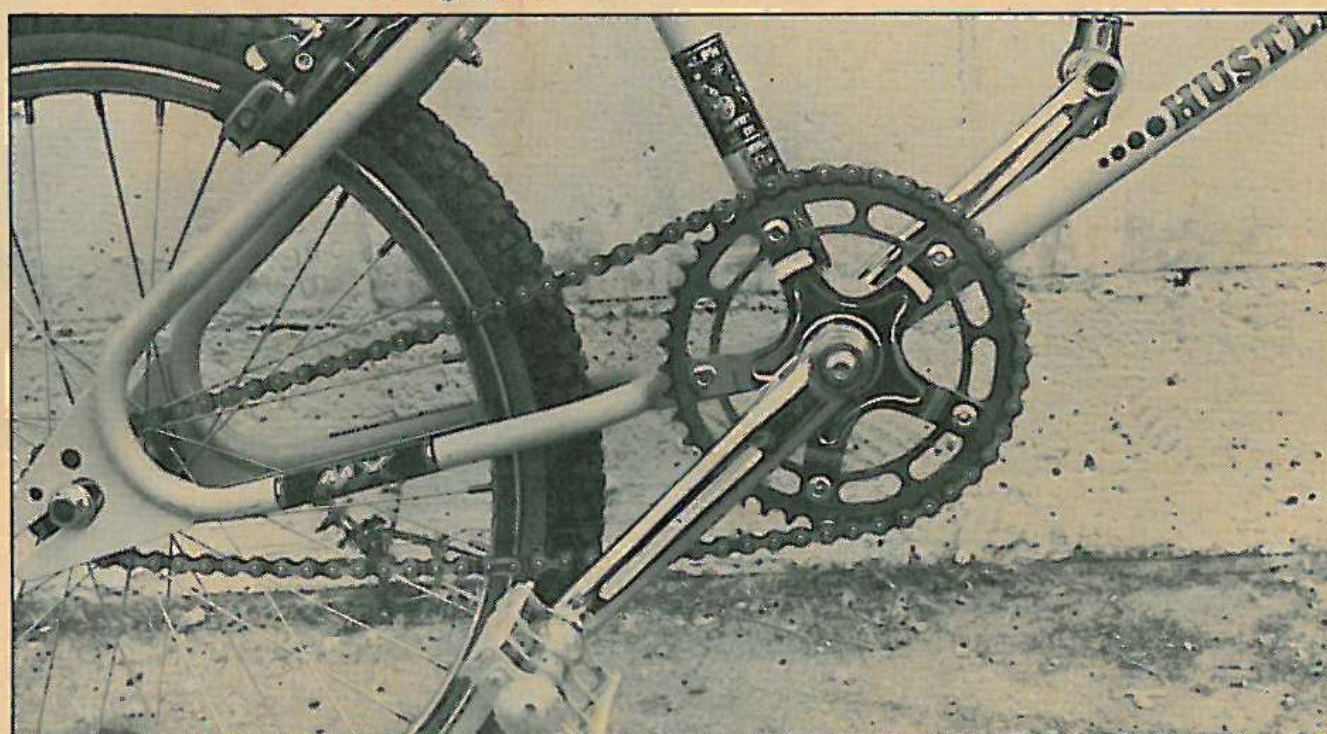

Because of the long wheelbase, you have to work at it to get radical with the Hustler.

• For guys who are big but don't want to go to a cruiser yet, Ralph Mundia, owner of Ralph's Bicycles, has created the Hustler Super Pro. The Super Pro looks like a regular BMX bike, but it's built a little bit bigger than normal with a 37-inch wheelbase. Still, it claims a 23-pound total weight, which isn't bad, all considered.

Forks and frame of the Super Pro are 4130 chrome moly, which is certainly to be expected for a bike that costs about $500! Handlebars are Red Line V-bars which are equipped with Oakley II grips. Other neat things include an alloy seat post with X-Caliber post clamp, Elina Pro saddle, and a Red Line moly steel Flight Crank and sprocket.

Rims are the standard Araya box design

alloy rims, laced to Shimano quick release hubs. Carlisle tires roll on the bike. Even though the bike is big, only one Shimano Dia-Compe MX-1000 caliper brake is used on the rear wheel. Pedals are by KKT. Another Red Line tidbit is the gooseneck.

Even though the Hustler is a brand new bike to the BMX scene, tests showed that it has what it takes to stay with the pack. The bike features lots of room for big legs, which means super holeshots are possible off the start line. Nachurllly, a good rider (a big one, at that) can make the Hustler, uh, really hustle, as we found out at the track.

So, let's say you've sprouted an extra few inches and you're too big for a regular 20 inch bike. Do you want to move out of class into cruisers? Maybe not. If not, the Hustler Super Pro is among a "new wave" of big BMXers for big BMX riders. •
